We learn, by telegraph from New-Orleans, that information has been received there that Santa Anna parties, and above all for these in Germany to act with had been declared Dictator for ten years. Another account states that he is to be proclaimed Emperor. It is likely that he has already assumed, as he has for sometime exercised, supreme power, and that these reports are founded on this fact. Whether he takes the title of Dietator or Emperor is a matter of small consequence in fact, though to his vanity it may appear fixed a single gun to save them. It is not necessary

In short, the busi-con recalling the events of those few fatal years, it is ness has been lamentably botched by Minister Marsh clear as daylight that the baseness of the reactionary and his co-workers, the lofty crest of this Ropublic lowered and its honor tarnished. We have lost by ill-advised diplomacy nearly all that we had gained by Capt. Inorsham's straight forward and manly action.

This matter has been so managed as to threaten the greatest difficulties. It can hardly fall to receive marked attention in Congress. Can The Union throw ary farther light upon it? Let it at least assure us that the Executive has in no manner recognized nor sanctioned Mr. Marsh's illustarred agreement.

. THE RUSSIAN DEFEAT.

It is quite possible that the Eastern Question is now entering on its last stage, and that the status quo may French proverb that, among the blind the one-eyed is an be once more restored. All the hopes which the European Liberale have lately directed toward Turkey will then be frustrated, and the universal struggle between the two bestile principles that so unequally divide the other side of the Atlantic, will be postponed to some more suitable period. Certainly, however, as for exit has gone, it has been a curious and unheardof phenomenon to see the wishes, sympathies, and in the opinion of some, even the real interests of progress, civilization and liberty, grouped around the Crescent against the European bugbear, the Ursa Major

For the present it is probable that the action of the. drama is at least suspended. The Danube has inter | ruled Europe, and realized the otherwise ridiculous fered more efficaciously than European diplomaey. The wintersiready baving settled on the Principalities, will render warlike attempts on both sides impossible, with | the expectation of wars this spirit will be entertained, the exception of skirmishing and partial fighting, where | stirred up, and exalted. Peace alone can destroy it, and human blood will be spilled merely for the sake of sustaining what is called military honor. Diplomacy will continue its busy work with more case : peaceful conssels will be listened to, and the breach may be patched up. But whatever may be the results obtained in the future, the losses on the side of Eussia are irreparable. We do not mean the battles of Oltonitza Ginegavo. Kalefat, or Nikelneff, in Asia. All these victories are of second-rate value-rather rencontres than real battles-and from them even the most sanguine Turcophile connot safely draw a horoscope for the final issue of the struggle. But in the conduct of the whole affair. from the sending of Menchikell to the issuing of the last manifesto, the Czar and his advisers have showed so many weak sides, and developed such poverty of statesmanship and diplomatic capacity, that we seek astonlabed for that matchless skill which is ascribed to the Cabinet of St. Petersburg by the politicians of all parties in the Old World. With the most minute scratiny we can nowhere perceive the dexterity which is said to have so long check-mated all the diplomacy of Europe. Still at the head of affairs we see the same certifie of panes known for years in the conduct of political affairs, but vainly do we search through their recent proceedings for that superior foresight, which has been proclaimed by friend and for as unparalleled in other Cabinets.

We shall not here go over again all the public documents, the circulars, notes and manifestos issued in the course of the last nine months by Nicholas and his Minister. They have been analyzed sufficiently as they In the Senate, yesterday, considerable business of no encossively appeared, and their superficiality, bad faith unintained by it at that time. its responsibility. Then there was time enough for the revolutionary decision and vigor. Then was the moment for them atterly to destroy the Austrian Empire. We assert likewise most positively that if any such catastrophe had taken place during 1848 and even if the Emparer Percinand and the whole bouse of Harshard had been destroyed, Russia would not have moved one step or here to re-cepilder who preserved that family, or provented the whole decomposition of that Empire. Certain it is that quick and decided action might have As there may yet be half a dozen people who do not saved the liberty of Central Europe or Germany, and

In 1849 the aspect of affairs was changed. The conservatives, combined at all points, measured their strength, profited by the numerous faults of their anlegenists, stirred up to a flame all national, social and territorial prejudices, and above all the accursed military spirit; and finally they turned their hopes toward Russin. The Czar in reply came forward but cauwarrantably -Austria in seizing him, and the United *tiensly at the beginning. When Nicholas interfered in Hungary, the struggle in Italy was already dying out: Naples was again in the absolute power of her King: pillitary bonor was gathering the landwehr around the King of Prussia: Berlin was in the hands of Wrangel party and the mistakes and faults of the liberals and leading revolutionists contributed more to elevate Nicholas to the hight where he has since stood, than bitter enemies now discover that Russia can very easily be irelated from Europe, deprived of all real allies, and forced to stand alone or to yield. Whateverbattles the Eussian armies may henceforth win on the Danube, or even at the nost of the Balkan, the defeat already sustained by the diplomacy of St. Petersburg can never be obliterated. And on summing up the events of the present year we are confirmed in the opinion that the Russian diplomacy is neither so adroit nor so truly states manlike as is generally believed, and that the renown of superiority, which it has enjoyed, is exclusively due to the meannesses or incapacity of the European politicians of all parties and all shades. In this case the oracle, may well be applied. It is said that by a pacific settlement of the pending question the hopes for emancipation of Europe will be postpened indefinitely. We do not share the common destendency about the final result, distant though it may be. JUDGMENT ON THE SATANIC PRESS.

When we gave, a few months since, appropos to emething, a review of The Satanic Press, with the Liceard Adventures of its Editor, James Gordon Benneit, we mentioned that among other marks of public distinction which he had received were seven horsewhippings in public, not counting sundry "cuts," cuffings and kickings, and having his jaws forced open and his throat spit into. We are reminded by a good authority that we have done Mr. Bennett injustice in limiting the number of such marks of public distinction received by him: it was not simply seven horsewhippings which system! That element is Individualism. The private be received, but nine. We cheerfully make this correction on the present occasion, as especially opportune to a description which we are about to give of another mark of distinction accorded to him yesterday-not a bedily horsewhipping, but an unequaled moral and pecuniary flagellation, which our duty as didaetic censors and public journalists requires us to secondrel is condemned -condemned, too, by THE Promention. In doing so we shall confine ourselves as pre. Let not his sewer-sheet roll its maximess and fifth rigidly as possible to the circumstances of the case. These circumstances are made the bases of legal decisions, and therefore of superior weight and higher direction to a country which a sumes to be governed by falsehood will not serve him. We say he has been laws, then if they were simple statements without such authoritative connection. To the details of the matter, theu:

Our readers must have been apprised by our legal reports during this and the past week, that a trial has siens and hates in society, by classing one set as aristocheen pending in the Superior Court, a case of libel, racy and the other as plebeians; and taking, therefore, Edward P. Fry against James Gordon Bennett. We. have chosen in deference to the defendant, to make no condemned. Upon looking at the jury in question we stand by his friends, and frown upon open and insidensen. remarks on the matter, lest we should in the least prejudice his cause, for we hold that even an assassineven a moral assassin-has under such circumstances chants; and two mechanics. These are the men who the immunity of being left free from any comments have condemned the libeler belonging to The which might prejudice the jury. On the other hand it is true that during the trial Mr. Bennett made use of him to do it although, master of the science of the Committee, and Mr. Beschit, was appointed. "All suffering doth cease:" and so accordingly yesterday a verdict was rendered and this legal matter, which has been before the courts five years, was brought to a close. This verdiet gives TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS damages with costs to the plaintiff. So James Gordon Bennett is at last, after a long interval, convicted of the grossest and most inferens libels, and sentenced to pay exemplary campres. His lawyers have, owing to the facilities of delay, long prevented the trial from coming to anifsue, but the plaintiff, with what we are assured is but characteristic determination, has never held back for an instant, but, is proportion to the intensity of the difficultv of obtaining a decision, has pursued his ead.

In mence and immeasurable as are the blackguardism and infamy of The Satanic Press-infamous as it is to a proverb-lis conduct toward Mr. E. P. Fry has been more than ordinarily intemperate, indecent, foul and damaable. We own to an exhaustion of rhetoric in may attempt to paint The Satanic and its Editor in such verbal tints as would make their pictures life-like. We feel the pauperism of the dictionary-the marasn.us of idion a-in all such efforts to describe them. We cen understand the starving wretch, with tear-withered eyer, with wiited cheek with shrunken vitals, and almost pulseless heart, driven to the last of crimes to get the bread to save life. We can understand a Thug, or even under certain circumstances a Burke; both beong to Pandemonium, but still they are comprehenside. But the creature who directs The Satanie, who cycle in wealth and libels-who amasses and stabs. and sinks and amasses-whose whole life seems made up of the refuse of depravity, is a mystery to us. Cause rd effect seem wanting here, and human nature stands aghest at a very Colossus of perstraion, boasting that his legs rest on each hemisphere, and spread over a

The case in question we may briefly describe. It roums that Mr. E. P. Fry, a gentleman of Philadelphia-accomplished, according to the history given, in more than collegiste attainments-chose to give a new Benier, London. Besides this there was an increased erekestra full one third greater than the public had litherto heard. The chorus was also augmented to the same extent; the best old and newly-come artists engaged; the bars for the sale of liquor excluded from the house, and, in a word, every effort made to render the whole in the highest sense a temple of lyrical art. Mr E. P. Fry however, had been bred a gentleman-or, is other words, he was determined not to keep company with blackguards directly or indirectly; consequently he declined to advertise in The Satanic, or have his print ing done at that office. Considering the worse than dley pusilsnimity of some of our public men-considthees in the highest quarters, and even went so far as an object. Watch and see !

ing that scores of men in this City have meanly ducked and dodged to its attacks, and some even sneaked off the trial-question, fearing to appear as witnesses againgt the ruffian-we must repeat the common conviction of every deceat man in the community, that the plaintiff From Our Own Corresponden entitled himself to emphatic moral applause for being about the first man-out of the editorial profession -to defy and spit upon Mr. Bennett; and finally, after five years' uninterrupted prosecution of his suit, to legally blast him to a lower deep of infamy than ever his Tertarus gropings had yet reached. As we have already published, in greater or less detail, the evidence and speeches of this trial, we shall not give now any synopsis of it. Sufficient to say, that while the Opera, as appeared by the evidence, was morally and technically reformed. The Satanic left no mire of beastiality undisturbed, no possibility of obloquy unsounded, no aeridity of venom unspent, to wreak libel on libel, and lis the secret. It is believed that at least one thereof on lie, on the head of the plantief. Swora to do him the Cabinet is well aware of the movement. Well might they think so, when it is fresh in public recellection that two of the most eminent statesmen in the United States both bent their necks to the hogyoke of the ruffian-one of them said, as published and not denied, "Tell Mr. Bennett that his patriotic "course has deserved well of the country;" and the other gave him a letter of introduction to an American render necessary a revolutionary force in that quarter Legation when he went abroad. Of course when candidates for the Presidency go through the lower substratum of the sewers of party to get the good ward of such a personage, the Republic must be hastening to ruin, unless there be civic virtue in public persons. Thank Heaven, there is a new element in the social gentleman, however modest of demeaner, simple of purpose and delicate of frame, can take the lead in doing that which shivering senators feared, and from which rich corporations recoiled. The tide is now turned. The ruffian bas got his de-

JOHN MUTCHEL.

We regret that the Civic Societies which proposed to benor Mr. MITCHEL with a public parade and ovation seem aggrieved and offended by his declining to receive the distinguished honors thus tendered. Mr MITCHEL comes among us a fugitive and an outlaw, with. the rust of the chain still enting into his limbs, and enser to atone for his years of constrained inaction and itefficiency, by earnest, telling labor in the cause of Universal Freedom. He feels that a parade of twenty thousand people, many of whom must lose thereby time that is money, and all of whom must les subjected to expense and the chances of stormy and inclement weather at this wintry senson, would be a demonstration unsuited to his position and his fortunes. He has not come here a conqueror but a reville, and he regards his battle of life as not yet ended—in fact, hardly begun. He is about to establish ty thousand people, many of whom must lose thereended-in fact, hardly begun. He is about to establish and edit a weekly journal here, and, while he prizes the sympathy and aid of those who believe his past course has deserved the approval and confidence of the haters of Oppression, he does not desire special honors at their hands, but only the consideration due from every true reldier of Liberty for a comrade who has struggled and suffered in their ranks. We appeal to all true hearts for a generous judgment of his decision in the premises. How many would wish to see him dragged reluctantly, like a captive, in a procession-parade which seems to him untimely and B-bestowed! Every man must see through his own yes: otherwise he might as well have been born blind. Mr. MITCHEL has chosen his course deliberately, and we think many who now condemn it will yet see that he has chosen wheely.

His alleged consent to the contemplated parade is simply a misapprehension. When he gave what is regarded as such assent, he was unaware of the character and extent of the honor intended. Had he understood them then, his answer would have been what it
